The 52nd Annual Primary Care and Family Medicine Symposium is presented by Augusta University faculty. The course directors are Laura L. Mulloy, DO, FACP, Section Chief and Professor of Medicine (Nephrology, Hypertension and Transplantation Medicine) and Allen L. Pelletier, MD, FAAFP, Professor of Family Medicine.

OBJECTIVES
This symposium should prepare participants to:
• Review advances in treating diseases commonly seen by primary care providers
• Outline practical, evidence-based approaches for diagnosis and management that reflect recent advances in treatment
• Use evidence-based recommendations for optimal treatment of: cancers, infectious disease, orthopedic conditions, surgically managed conditions, condition-specific screening, medical ethics, psychiatric illness, and acute and chronic medical conditions across the age spectrum
• Discuss challenges and controversies of new drugs for children, adolescents and the elderly.

TARGETED AUDIENCE
This course will present a broad spectrum of material to family medicine physicians and other specialists who focus on primary medical care. Many physicians regularly attend this course, so topics rotate and change yearly. The presentations emphasize differential diagnosis and management strategies.

This is an excellent way to prepare for recertification or to review for certifying examinations. The comprehensive syllabus with references is a solid resource for clinicians and office staff.
