Planning for emergencies can help our entire community ensure the best outcome possible if tragedy should strike our schools, businesses, or places of worship.

Knowledge is power, and shared knowledge that leads to consistent, cohesive ACTION is the key to our community-wide planning for, responding to and recovering from such an event.

Whether you’re a city manager, a facility manager, a first responder, a concerned parent, a school principal, or an ER doctor, everyone in the community has a role to play, and NFPA 3000™ (PS) can help show us how to prepare.

During active shooter and hostile events, time is of the essence. The number of variables, personnel, and logistics quickly escalates and if we’re not working together, valuable time is lost, and possibly additional life. As a result, preparing for these attacks with individual readiness plans is no longer enough. We must begin thinking and acting as integrated communities.

Join us for a full morning of presentations from local, regional and national level subject matter experts on preparing for, responding to and recovering from ASHER Events and a dynamic afternoon of group interactive training, Tabletop Exercises and round table discussions designed to be thought and ACTION provoking.
